About me

I am Simon, a geeky boy, that is just fascinated aboud bringing things into life. Since I can remember, I always stood upon problems that needed solutions, being the grandson of a blacksmith, I passed all of my childhood noons standing aside of my grandpa, just watching and asking questions, although most of the time his response was "you will see". It made me nervous but at the same time it made things much more interesting to me, I just wanted to know how things were done.

From the age of five, I adopted a nerdy lifestyle, playing games all day and learning interesting stuff on the net, it lasted at least another five years.
